A MAYOR ON THE JOB

Here's to Mayor Peters of Boston! There is a man not so puffed up with the dignity of office that he cannot, after the fashion ascribed to that good caliph, Haroun Al Raschid, go among his people incognito when occasion demands.

Mayor Peters disguised himself as a tramp and sought out the chief lodging houses and the charitable institutions which serve the physical needs of the down and out in order to find out just what treatment was being meted out to the unfortunate of Boston.

The lodging for a night which his highness the mayor was given brought him in touch, it is safe to say, with a class of citizenry with which he had never before mixed, at least not in his official capacity. He will be a better mayor for having rubbed elbows with the lowest strata in the social scheme. When he faces bankers, business men and the representatives of organized charities he will have the viewpoint not of the giver, but of the recipient of the city's alms.

Few public officials will go to such length as Mayor Peters in an attempt to be the real representative of all the people. But his example, coming from conservative Boston, is a precedent that may well be emulated.

WHAT THEY'RE WEARING

There is just one subject that men like to talk about. That subject is woman. The women know this, and so they are always inventing tantalizing ways to draw attention to themselves. They said they wanted to be on a social equality with men, and yet there is not a woman in the world who cannot outwit a man of the same general standing in life, circumstances and education.

It is a funny thing, but it always seems natural, when men are talking about woman's mentality, that the conversation should revolve around in the course of five minutes or so to the women's stockings. Just recently we had the spectacle of the women of Paris on one hand kicking because those employed in the office of the prefecture of police are prohibited from wearing silk stockings, high-heeled shoes, fur coats, plumed hats or diamond studded hair pins. On the other hand, we have the women of Boston, who have voluntarily declared against the silk stocking.

To be sure, few women out of Boston knew that any of the fair inhabitants of that city ever wore anything but stockings of a modest, deep blue cotton hulk. But 'tis not so. They are just like their sisters in the rest of America. Why is it that they now want to taboo the silk stocking? Why, it is because woolen stockings are in style just now, and the Bostonians are merely making a virtue of the necessity of conforming to the dictates of fashion.

Then how about Paris? Why do women there still cling to silk? Go and ask some women. We have to give it up.

OPPORTUNITIES OF THE DOLLAR

Never before in the history of the country have the inducements to saving been greater than at present. Government bonds yield from 5 per cent to 5.5 per cent, foreign nations of foremost standing borrow at 8 per cent, and our own industries pay from 6.5 per cent to 8 per cent. The lender occupies a point of vantage. The need of the world today is for capital, and he who has a dollar to lend can set upon it a most his own price.

Two decades ago 5.5 per cent was perhaps the general earning power of money when invested in unimpeachable security. The prevailing price of railway bonds was 4 per cent and even at that figure those of the best standing commanded a premium. In 1901 of 582 railway and industrial bonds listed on the New York stock exchange 175 yielded less than 4 per cent and one less than 3 per cent. Only 47 yielded more than 5 per cent.

But this is not all. Today prices for commodities are high, and the dollar is worth only about half as much as formerly. If its purchasing power is ever restored, a contingency which seems most likely if Europe returns to the gold standard, the lender will profit doubly. In other words, the possessor of capital can lend it with abnormally high rates and further inducement in the probability of getting back for his cheap dollar of the present the enhanced dollar of the future. Surely the reasons to save and invest were never more alluring.

THE STARVING BEES

Millions of bees will die before the clover and the apple trees blossom this year, B. F. Kindig, Michigan state inspector of apiaries, says, and he is warning bee keepers all over the country to get busy and save their colonies.

It is a humane act to save the bees, and the very fact that it is necessary draws a sad and striking parallel between these curiously intelligent, curiously stupid little insects, and man.

The bees, blessed with a warm winter, have eaten up their stores of honey unusually fast, and have also speeded the rearing of the new brood, out of season. Unwitting as is their sense of home, true as is their feeling for the good and poor sources of honey, estimable as is the community life of the hive, the bees err when a new condition hits them.

Men fall short in just the same way. Lulled by plenty, they immediately begin to spend their little stores of wealth, instead of laying up something for the morrow. They have a pathetic faith that things will turn out all right. This faith in the future is an excellent quality.

but too often is not salted down with good common sense. Men and bees, wise and foolish when will either of them develop real, workable thinking machines?

"The wages of sin is death." And pistols are sometimes used to hasten payment.

One form of craziness is to be pulling down when what is needed is a building up.

NEW TRILBY DIVIDE MINING COMPANY

D. F. Murphy, president; J. M. Fenwick, vice-president; E. Lang, secretary.
 This company has been organized to take over the property and plant of the original

Trilby Divide Mining Company

which has been lost to the old company upon judgment, execution and sheriff's sale. Stockholders of the old company may obtain shares in the

upon the surrender of the old certificates and the payment of 1c per share on or before the 31st day of March, 1921, after which date no further exchanges will be made.
 The Trilby consists of four claims lying between the Rosetta and Gold Seam; has a shaft 190 feet deep, full working equipment, has splendid surface showings and is well worthy of development. We advise our customers who are not holders of Trilby stock to pick up, if possible, some of the old stock and pay the assessment. It will surely make you a big profit.
